H. O. HUTSON DIES OF WOUND

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

HOPE today is burying W. Y. Foster. So young our country is, that practically within the scope of this one man's life is written the entire history of the settling of our city.

John Barrymore, Greatest Lover, Weds Again at 41

Married and Divorced Twice, He Turns Domestic for Happiness

THIS PROUD PAPA

"Dolores Made Me Think of True Happiness," John Declares

This is the fifth of a series of six stories on "Love Begins at 40," telling of prominent personages who found romance long after the years of their youth had passed.

By WILLIS THORNTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

If there was one man in the world you'd expect to be through with love at 41, it would be John Barrymore.

Married and divorced twice. A lifetime spent as a stage and screen actor.

When violent men go through a powerful country-side robbing filling stations and small merchants of money and goods they have failed to earn, and maintain hide-outs to deposit their loot in, it is time the local community launched its own crime crusade.

Much of the talk about federal intervention in police matters is merely a cowardly way of admitting that local cities and local police officers have fallen down on the job.

No criminal gang can operate for long, and no hide-out can be maintained, without tacit consent of the local community.

The resorts of men of the stamp of Freddy Boy Floyd are the disgrace, not of the nation at large, but of the local community that tolerates them.

The people of Hempstead and Nevada counties will stand squarely behind their peace officers in this latest though lamentable violence.

E. Hofer & Sons' Industrial News Review makes this comment on the proposal to regulate the telephone, telegraph and cable business:

Some of the most potent resistance to this bill will not be based on whether or not the communications industries have been financially arrogant and need regulation—it will be based on the fear of suppression of free speech. Voices are beginning to be heard now on that angle—and some of them are backed by names, such as that of Democratic Ex-Senator Reed of Missouri, that command wide and respectful attention. Almost everything that appears in the metropolitan newspapers, for instance, comes over the telephone wires—and the power of government in coloring news and comment, if it were able to dictate what can be transmitted, doesn't need describing.

Government regulation does not necessarily mean censorship.

Mr. Roosevelt stands pledged to examine the record of utility holding companies which have defied the effort of state and local government to regulate their rates. He is going to keep that promise—and the issue of censorship of the press has nothing to do with it.

Any paper which insists that it does not have a greater stake in the utility business than he has in the newspaper business—and any man in that fix ought to get out of one or the other before the people help him out.

Government regulation concerns itself solely with the rate charged the public by the utilities.

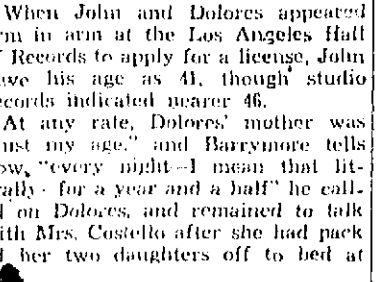

Government interference with the transmission either of news or private messages is something else entirely—and any official, or any party defending him, who seeks to coerce newspapers in their reporting of the facts of government will be committing political suicide.

Crowd Rocks With Laughter as Women "Revolutionists" Testify

REPUBLICANS FAIL

G. O. P. Strives Vainly to Subpoena Tugwell and Secretary Wallace

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The house committee investigating Dr. William A. Wirt's allegations of a Brain Trust revolution was told Tuesday by the hostesses at the celebrated dinner party that statements by him on what her guests said were false.

Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, one of the guests, also denied assertions by Wirt, saying, "We were unable to interrupt the flow of his conversation."

Quoted by Wirt as having herself quoted much from Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Rexford Tugwell at the dinner, she said Tuesday she never had read any of his writings.

Miss Alice Barrows, at whose Virginia home the dinner was held last September, said there was no mention there, as Wirt testified, about President Roosevelt being a Keresky who would be supplanted by a Stalin, or of Dr. Tugwell.

The other four diners were waiting to testify.

A huge crowd jammed the hearing room, including Anna Roosevelt Dall, the president's daughter.

Republicans sought in vain to subpoena Tugwell, Secretary Wallace and others, in the inquiry.

To the accompaniment of laughter, Miss Barrows said no guest other than Wirt could say anything because the Indiana educator talked constantly on inflation, and guests' attempts to interrupt him were futile.

Processing Tax to Be Collected Here

Federal Deputies to Meet Taxpayers in Hope April 23-24

Deputy collectors operating from headquarters in the federal building at Texarkana will make a tour of this territory beginning this week to assist taxpayers in preparing returns for the processing tax on hogs, grain or wheat, and the flour tax levied upon wheat, cotton, field corn and tobacco products.

Deputy Collector Henry Latimer has announced the complete itinerary for collectors. Any question arising in the mind of a tax payer as to the application of the law or the amount of tax or methods of making returns and the collection thereof, should be discussed with the deputy upon the dates listed below:

April 18, Foreman
April 19, Ashdown
April 20, 21 and 22, Texarkana
April 23 and 24, Hope
April 25, Reynolds, McCaskill
April 26, Washington, Ozan
April 27, Fulton, McNab

The processing law provides strong penalties for some forms of evasion.

Baseball Season to Open Tuesday

Cardinals and Yankees Likely to Win This Year's Flags

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Washington Senators and the Boston Red Sox were idle Monday after rain washed out the formal preview of the major league baseball season and all its attendant ceremony.

Tuesday all 16 teams of the two major leagues, weather permitting, will get away on the long run through the summer.

In the American League, in addition to the Senators at Boston, the Yankees open against the Athletics in Philadelphia, the St. Louis Browns are in Cleveland, and the Detroit Tigers in Chicago. The National League schedule opens with the world champion New York Giants entertaining the Phillies at home, Boston at Brooklyn, Pittsburgh at St. Louis and Chicago at Cincinnati.

Bishop Cannon Asks Dismissal, Declaring Conspiracy Unproved

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Attorneys for Bishop Cannon and Miss Ada Burroughs sought Tuesday to have the jury instructed to acquit them on a charge of conspiracy to violate the federal corrupt practices act. They contended that no evidence had been presented to prove a conspiracy. Justice Peyton Gordon of District of Columbia Supreme Court planned to render a decision as soon as arguments on the motion are completed.

England Slashes Income Tax 10 %

Government Ends Fiscal Year With Surplus of 200 Millions

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—The British public Tuesday received a gift of six pence on the pound reduction of income taxes—a reduction in the case of small incomes of approximately 10 per cent.

The reduction was announced by Chancellor Chamberlain in telling the House of Commons of the 1934-35 budget.

He further declared that one half of the pay cuts suggested by government employees would be restored July 1, and unemployment relief would be fully restored at the same time.

The first of the year the present automobile tax will be cut 25 per cent from its present rate of one pound ($4.87) per horsepower.

He announced that in the fiscal year just ending the government ran up a surplus of 200 million dollars and expected the ensuing year would show Great Britain with a profit of approximately 145 million.

He did not propose any provision in the budget for payment of war debts to America or receipts of war debts from Britain's debtors.

Taxes were reduced as a means to stimulate business, he said.

5 Fight Way Out of Colorado Pen

But 3 Are Recaptured in Wildest Prison Scene Since 1929

CANON CITY, Colo.—(AP)—Five convicts pushed their way out of the state penitentiary here Monday, slaying a guard and two civilians, kidnapping and beating two women and threatening the city into the wildest prison riot since the bloody prison riot of 1929.

Three of the men were soon captured. Two others were sought by police throughout the state Monday night.

Two of the captured men were so bloody and battered when they were returned to the prison that they were rushed at once to the hospital for treatment for bullet wounds. There is no word yet whether they had been beaten in desperate struggles with civilians and guards outside the prison walls.

Suddenly thrusting a knife at Joe Moschetti, 38, labor overseer, the quintet moved out through a gate which had been opened to admit a freight car. Moschetti was forced to accompany them.

Once outside the wall the five scattered and hid amidst a hail of bullets from the prison towers. One, John Crosby, was struck by rocks kicked up by the bullets and fell, believing himself wounded. He was easily captured.

Prizes Offered for Selection of 5 Greatest U. S. Scandals

Saenger Offers Cash and Ticket Awards—Answers Must Reach Star Office by 5 p. m. Thursday

Scandal is a horrible word, yet one that has been made world-famous by George White of New York in his yearly stage reviews.

For the first time Hope can now see this famous White and his original New York "Scandals" chorus without leaving town, and paying $5.50.

But the Saenger manager and Hope Star are anxious to find out just what were the most famous American scandals. Contest ends Thursday night, April 19 and Hope Star will be the sole judge.

Mail or bring all replies to Hope Star office by 5 p. m. Thursday night. Winners will be announced in Saturday night's paper. Will yours be among them?

W. Y. Foster, Hope Banker and Civic Leader, Succumbs

One of Founders of City, Dies at 82—Funeral at 4 Tuesday

BROUGHT IN RAILS

Foster Instrumental in Junction of L. & A. and Frisco Here

W. Y. Foster, 82, one of the founders of Hope, banker and commercial leader for two generations, died Monday night at his home on West Avenue B after an illness of three years.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the family residence, conducted by the Rev. Thomas Brewster, pastor of First Presbyterian church. Burial was in Rose Hill cemetery.

Surviving are his widow, one son, Charles B. Foster of Shreveport, a sister, Mrs. C. A. Bridwell of Hope, a brother, W. C. Foster of Denver, Colo.

Active pallbearers: K. G. McRae, Dorsey McRae, Marvin Jones, Roy Anderson, Ralph Routh, E. F. McFaddin, George M. Green and C. C. Spragins.

Born in Columbia County

Born in Columbia county near Magnolia July 17, 1851, Mr. Foster came to Hope at the age of 22, soon after the Iron Mountain railroad, now known as the Missouri Pacific system, was extended through here.

His first business connection was the establishment of a hardware store, which was the city's first. He operated the store a number of years.

Taking of deposits from persons who trusted him with their money, led to a private banking business. He organized as W. Y. Foster, banker.

A number of years later Mr. Foster and Capt. J. T. West organized the Bank of Hope, located at Elm and Second streets, now the site of L. C. Burr & Co.

Years later Mr. Foster organized the Hempstead County bank, serving as president. On one occasion years ago, when a default occurred, he put up the bulk of his fortune so that no depositor would lose.

Brought in Railroads

Through his financial connections and close association with W. A. Buchanan and Mr. Winchell, he was instrumental in bringing the L. & A. and Frisco railroads to Hope.

Other business enterprises Mr. Foster headed as an executive were the Hope Cotton Oil company and the Hope Fertilizer company.

Until his death he was the only surviving member of Hope's first town officials. He was among seven officials chosen when the town was incorporated. He was chairman of the committee which obtained water and lights systems for Hope.

He held many public offices from alderman to school commissioner. At one time he was a trustee of Arkansas College, Batesville.

When the city built its first water mains Mr. Foster loaned his private money for this project. He was instrumental in erecting the present city hall.

His other connections: Past president of the Arkansas Bankers' association; past member of Arkansas State Highway Commission; elder in First Presbyterian church; past president of Hempstead County Fair association and Hope Chamber of Commerce; one of the originators of the Watermelon Festival.

As a friend of the farmer, Mr. Foster advocated and advocated farm diversification.

Fifty-nine years ago he married Miss Izora Crowson of Magnolia. Mr. and Mrs. Foster have made Hope their home since then.

President Signs Power Probe

Soviet to Strike Back at Debt Law

Resent U. S. Anti-Credit Policy—France Ousts Trotsky

MOSCOW, Russia—(AP)—Active Soviet reprisal against the newly-enacted United States law against further loans to delinquent debtors came Tuesday in an admonition to Soviet economic organizations to alter their intention to give preference to American materials and equipment for the remainder of the second five-year plan.

The newspaper which is the official organ of the commissariat of heavy industry warned that the Soviet government will not be coerced into a debt settlement.

France Ousts Trotsky

PARIS, France—(AP)—Leon Trotsky, exiled Russian revolutionist, was ordered to leave France by the government Tuesday because of efforts to organize a world revolution.

Carrigan, Henry to Take City Posts

New Aldermen Will Be Sworn in Tuesday Night

Inauguration of two new aldermen will take place Tuesday night at a meeting of the city council.

Dr. F. D. Henry will be sworn in as alderman from Ward three, replacing Theo P. Witt.

Dr. P. B. Carrigan will take the oath as alderman from Ward four. The outgoing alderman is Ira Halliburton.

Jack G. Robison to Coach at DeQueen

Former Hope U. of A. Star Is Named Assistant

Clyde Van Sickle and Jack G. Robison, former University of Arkansas football stars, were recently chosen head coach and assistant coach respectively at DeQueen High School.

The new coaches are expected to take up their duties early next fall. Robison attended school here. For several years he played on the Bobcat squad. Later he attended school at southern Methodist University, Dallas, and then the University of Arkansas.

Van Sickle's home is in Oklahoma. Terminating his career as a Razorback star, Van Sickle turned professional, playing two seasons with the Green Bay Packers.

Officers Search in Vain for His Pal; Robbery at Fulton

Victim of Police Guns Buried at Prescott Tuesday

AUTO TIRES STOLEN

$150 Worth Seized in Raid on J. B. Shults Store at Fulton

Wounded when he resisted arrest in connection with a series of robberies, Henry O. Hutson, 50, Prescott carpenter and fugitive, died at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning in Julia Chester hospital from a bullet that entered his back and emerged through the abdomen.

While funeral services were being held Tuesday afternoon at Prescott, officers in Hempstead and Nevada counties sought Otis Bean, a companion of the dead man who escaped in a volley of shots after officers had trapped the two on a highway viaduct one mile east of Hope Monday afternoon.

Bean Believed Shot

Both men are residents of Prescott. Officers said they believed Bean was wounded when Hutson was shot.

An emergency operation was performed on Hutson Monday night in an attempt to save his life.

The shooting occurred when Hutson and Bean fled after recognizing officers as they approached the bridge on foot.

Hutson and Bean have been sought for weeks for filling station and store robberies in Nevada and Clark counties.

Hutson was a carpenter and night watchman at Prescott for several years. He was a World War veteran, and served in the Pacific.

He was a member of the bonus army. He and his wife separated two years ago. He has a seven-year-old son by a former marriage.

Robbery at Fulton

Coincident with the death of Hutson and the search for Bean on robbery charges, the J. B. Shults general mercantile store at Fulton was robbed Monday night of 15 automobile tires, valued at $150.

Burglars entered the store some time after 10 o'clock by crashing a rear window. Nothing was missing from the store except the tires. No attempt was made to open the cash register.

Apparently the main object was automobile tires. Officers said Tuesday afternoon that no trace of the robbery had been found.

Plans Under Way to Establish Band

L. E. Crumpler, of Magnolia, Invites New Local Support

Plans for the revival of the Hope band, which has been inactive recently although once a large and flourishing community institution, were under way Tuesday with the arrival here of L. E. Crumpler, well known bandmaster of Magnolia.

Mr. Crumpler directs town bands at Magnolia, Stamps and Lewisville; his Stamps organization contains 42 persons.

Mr. Crumpler is anxious to interview prospects for membership in the local band, and to obtain support from Hope community organizations.

U. S. Relief Probe

Governor and Newspaper Executives Named in Indictments

FARGO, N. D.—(AP)—Nine persons, including Gov. William A. Langer, were named in indictments returned late Monday by a federal grand jury which has conducted an investigation into charges that government relief workers were forced to contribute to political funds.

Governor Langer was removed as head of federal relief activities in North Dakota several weeks ago after Washington officials said that preliminary investigation had revealed relief workers were forced to contribute to the support of the The Leader, administration newspaper.

Tearing the charges "politically inspired," Langer denied them at the time and said he would welcome an investigation.

Others named in the indictments, which charge conspiracy to violate federal statutes, are Oscar Chaput, business manager of The Leader; state Senator Oscar Erickson, listed as publisher of the paper; state Highway Commissioner Frank A. Vogel; Harold McDonald, solicitor for the paper; R. A. Kinzer, Joseph Kinzer, Paul J. Yeater and G. A. Hamble.

One of the offenses alleged was violation of the statute making it an offense for one federal employee to solicit funds from another for political purposes.

These indicted face trial at the next term of federal court at Bismarck.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Beware of the Porcupine! Huey Has Quills and Foes Nurse Wounds. Thinkers Give Horse a Treat. Hurdy-Gurdy Turns That Long-Hunted Corner.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON—"Don't ever touch a porcupine unless you expect to get some feathers in you!"

That homely warning from Huey Long to his fellow senators reeks with as much truth as Senator Pat Harrison's assurance that Huey is the least respected man in the Senate.

Detested as he is, Huey has quills. From that angle, respect for him is mounting. You can pour vials of scorn on him, but it's a bad bargain if you get your skin full of thorns in return.

The least you can expect is that Huey will get the galleries laughing at you, whether or not his barbs make sense.

Sensors in states contiguous to Louisiana worry lest Huey enter their territory and campaign against their re-election. Many of their constituents are the type of folks who elect Huey.

He invaded Arkansas to put over Mrs. Hattie Caraway against the wishes of Majority Leader Joe Robinson, the other Arkansas senator. Connally of Texas has had nightmares and Huey is expected to be in Mississippi this year campaigning for a friend who seeks the seat of Senator Stephens.

But here's what happens in the Senate when you touch "the porcupine":

When Robinson tried to squelch Huey last year, Long exposed extensive "power trust" connections of Joe's law firm and effectively branded him as a reactionary.

When Ham Lewis of Illinois recently assailed him, Long switched the topic to an unpaid subscription to his weekly paper and an unpaid dinner check so quickly that Ham found himself demanding that the chortling galleries be quieted or cleared. Nothing hurts Ham more than gallery laughter at his expense.

When Pat Harrison defended Robinson against Long's attacks the other day he found himself forced to explain a $15,000 note bearing his name which Long said was "part of the bankrupt assets of closed banks in Mississippi."

And Bennett Clark of Missouri, when he defended Harrison, soon found himself promising to pay Long $500 for a portable sound truck used in his own campaign—after Huey had flashed a receipt showing he himself had paid the bill.

Cheap stuff, perhaps—but an amazing performance. Unpleasant things happen to Huey, too. But his hide is so tough that it could be used for armor plate.

A Treat for the Horse
Spectacles for the week: Congressman George Holden Tinkham, lion-hunter and one of two Republicans who upheld Roosevelt's veto, standing in the Arlington hotel doorway dressed in dark cap, dark coat and vest with inches of pink shirt showing above the belt, khaki breeches, leather puttees and black shoes. Apparently waiting for a horse or something.

Senator "Cottonmouth" Sprawling in the Hamilton's lobby, handkerchief around his neck, flanked by a couple of South Carolina farmers. Big, spectacled, cowboy-hatted John Jones, brother and personal business agent of R.F.C.'s Jesse, fresh from Texas in the R.F.C.'s lobby and letting people know just who he was.

Peppery old Col. E. R. Bradley, the horse race man who refused to see all reporters who wanted to talk about his Huey Long row, but said, "I'll be right down" to one who would ask him about the Kentucky Derby talking that reporter's ear off for three hours.

Hurdy-Gurdy Prospects
Showers of coins drop from windows of government office building when the hurdy-gurdy man comes around. Completed statistics of the White House Easter egg-tossing show: Attendance, 50,000, largest ever children lost and returned, 44; children ill from overeating, 25.

The new Russian embassy has seven kitchens and kitchenettes, respectively, for big dinners. Ambassador and Mrs. Trotsky, Councilor and Mrs. Skvirsky, the staff, the chancery, the servants, and general fourth floor utility.

Bill Scott, just promoted to police inspector here, began his rise from the ranks when he couldn't help laughing long and loud as the then President Taft fell from his horse and landed on the famous Taft stomach.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Teachers Need Understanding Just as Pupils Under Them—They're Responsible to "System"

This article on the teacher concludes Olive Roberts Barton's series on Modern Child Training.

Children want to like their teacher. Some one must take mother's place during the day and they naturally look to her.

How greedily they drink in every word of personal kindness. A pat on the shoulder is remembered for days—perhaps forever. They are hungry for her approbation and praise and expect in very few cases, try to please her.

Yet taking the teaching profession by and large—any cross section will do—there are as many different types of personalities as there are in any other business, trade or profession in the world—and there will be some who are not temperamentally fitted for teaching, regardless of how many degrees they have.

Removing the Experienced
I have seen teachers removed from positions who were more than qualified to hold them, to make room for younger women with more letters behind their names. Women who were not only loved children, but who were born to understand the individual characteristics of each little stranger under their charge. Perhaps they were married and this was the reason for removal. In some cases these married women were supporting jobless husbands or whole families. And single girls with no particular reason except that of a career have been put in their places.

Now it makes no difference to me personally about this state of affairs. In many cases the teacher removed should have been, and the young, energetic girl who took her place is indeed more perfectly fitted for the work.

What I believe needs emphasizing, however, is the selection of teachers who are akin to childhood and who have an understanding of and sympathy (in its true sense) for the behavior, the failures and the earnestness of the child to do the best he can.

Satisfying a System
Of course, there is this problem. Behind the teacher there is a system that she must satisfy. She cannot turn maudlin and cry over the 50 children under her control and for whose success and marks she is responsible. She has to answer to the powers that be for failures and marks. Also she has to do her own discipline, which is unfortunate. That should be a separate department entirely as the careless child and the incorrigible are problems, very often, for the specialist.

But when a child goes through elementary school, junior high and high school, he is almost certain to have one or two teachers who will not understand him because she has not the gift of understanding any child.

In such a case it is best, not to make matters worse by siding with the child when he calls her "Old This or That." Your heart may ache for him and you feel like adding a few choice adjectives of your own.

Smoothing Troubled Waters
If there is any injustice too drastic, a little quiet conversation with the teacher herself may help. If there is no real trouble, but just a feeling of irritation and dislike on the child's part, it might be advisable to say, "I understand, dear, and I am sorry. But that is the way it is sometimes. Daddy works for how hard he works and how he tries to please. I used to have a store (or wherever it was) where the head was hard to please. We all got discouraged. Try to do your best and be patient. Some day it will change and you will be in another room."

Sometimes it is good for children to have the experience of people not "understanding" or "liking them." There is home to balance it. And besides it is typical of life.

The child may be to blame. Do not judge any teacher too harshly. Teaching is hard work, very. Don't jump to conclusions. A little investigating, a little oil on the wheels will do wonders in most cases.

Compliments
Sally: "It must be three years since I saw you. I hardly knew you—you have aged so."

Sara: "Well, I wouldn't have known you either except for the dress."

The Railroad Situation Gets More and More Complicated

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

New summer dance dresses and short sleeved daytime frocks won't flatter a girl unless she has soft white arms and elbows that are as smooth as rose petals. Any woman who wishes to achieve arm and elbow perfection should devote at least fifteen minutes each day to them.

First, use a brush and plenty of soap on your arms, particularly the elbows, when you take your daily bath. If discolorations persist, resort to a piece of pumice for the elbows. Don't rub too hard or long enough to injure the skin and be sure to apply a soothing body or hand lotion directly afterward.

As a matter of fact, rubbing lotion from the wrists on up to the shoulders each time you put it on your hands is an excellent habit to cultivate.

Lemon juice is an effective arm and elbow bleach. If you have little time to complete your toilet, why not cut the lemon in halves and rest each elbow in one half while you're busily powdering or brushing your hair?

Tomato juice bleaches (mildly) and at the same time has a soothing, smoothing effect. And buttermilk is another home bleach and softener that

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PABLITO, a handsome youth accused of a murder he did not commit, escapes from Key West to Havana with two thieves, BRAVO and LOTTE, MAICITA TREADWELL, who could prove Pablito innocent, fears scandal and remains silent.

In Havana Pablito, under the name of "Juanito," becomes celebrated as a boxer and he and Bravo even a gymnasium. Pablito loves ESTELLE FIELD, daughter of rich Jim Field, and she loves him. They meet and plan to marry, but Field enters Estelle on a yacht cruise. Two years later, believing Pablito lost to her, she becomes engaged to ALEC DAVIDS.

After ALEC, a titled Englishman and Pablito's father, has been carrying on a search for him, completing his New York detective.

Believing Estelle faithless, Pablito spends months in aimless travel and then returns to Havana, then and little welcome little eagerly.

Meanwhile Field has lost his fortune. David breaks his engagement to Estelle and she and her father decide to go to Havana.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

THE Noyes case absorbed Marcia Treadway. She knew that Pablito had lived with Noyes and now, of course, Noyes would step out of bidding to claim the fortune that was his. He could, no doubt, tell her where to find Pablito. Once she found the youth, Marcia had resolved that she would tell the truth and free him from the old charges.

No longer did Marcia dream of making Pablito dependent on her—of trips to France and Spain and Italy. She wanted instead to say, "This is the truth I owe you and must tell to set my mind at rest."

Her maid found her surprisingly kind these days. Marcia no longer became harsh at the slightest interference with her will. "Ah, well," she thought, smiling, "I've traveled a long way. She thought too of those years during which she had planned to shield Pablito and herself. She now knew that she could shield him only by the truth and that with the truth she must tear from herself the protection that sheltered her from the world's scorn.

The Noyes case filled long columns in the newspapers. There were many stories about Josie Martell who had danced and acted with so much charm and grace. "Another Maude Adams" she had been called.

Staid middle-aged men smiled, reading this column, and then sighed a little sadly. A look over the shoulder is likely to cause a gasp, while a look ahead makes the audience tense. And in middle age one does not look ahead so easily as one looks behind.

NORRIS NOYES' wife had confessed that she killed Josie Martell. In the midst of the confession she had lost consciousness and had been revived by drastic measures. Then, gasping and holding off the chill finger of death by sheer will power, she finished what she had to say—the story she had kept secret since the night her husband had taken a revolver from her hands to say, "Go!"

Mrs. Noyes had been jealous, she confessed. Her jealousy had grown until it completely overpowered her; she knew no other emotion. She had followed her husband one night to Josie Martell's home which was well up town. A maid had admitted her and she saw the maid disappear into the rear of the house. Then from the hall she listened to voices in the next room—Josie Martell's voice and Noyes'. They were talking of pictures and of artists and they said nothing that could possibly offend Mrs. Noyes. She went into the room then and Josie Martell arose to make her welcome. But Mrs. Noyes did not sit down. She stood in the doorway, smiling. Then she raised one hand, holding the small Spanish revolver that she always kept in her dressing table drawer. She fired.

When she next knew anything beyond her husband's swift, urgently voiced, "Go!" she was on her way home. She let herself in with her key. The testimony of Josie Martell's maid that a woman had called that night to see her mistress was dismissed as unimportant after Noyes' disappearance had been interpreted as a confession.

Mrs. Noyes had had one letter from her husband after that. He wrote her that he had never been faithful to her physically. His interest in Miss Martell had been no more than a friendship based on mutual interests. Nevertheless he was guilty, Noyes said, because he had led his wife into loving him and later ceased to care for her. He also wrote that he was not coming back, that she must rear their son as best she could and with the realization that the crime was his, not hers.

MRS. NOYES' confession, delivered between deep gasps, was complete. Perhaps it was a relief at last to speak. Beyond doing justice to her husband and delivering the money to him that was his—

—if he could be found—the confession made little difference. The son whose rearing had been left to his mother was one of those reported "missing" in France. Perhaps the boy had been urged to a too-gallant duty by thoughts of a father who had killed a woman and run away.

Thus are the patterns of life woven.

At the same time there was also much space in the newspapers devoted to accounts of Jim Field's spectacular financial crash. There had been a drop in the market that took him under, leaving him completely at the mercy of men whom he had betrayed. These men—settling on the little that was left—bent their red, rough necks to pick the bones, as their feathers grew sleek and shiny.

Estelle's pictures were printed widely, one of them bearing the caption, "Deserted By Lover After Father's Failure."

Before leaving for Havana Estelle had learned of the crash. She had received a letter from Alec Davids the morning of their departure. Alec wrote, as cruelly as possible, that their engagement must be at an end. He said that he knew she had never cared for him. He had not cared for her either until he had determined to show her who was master. Then somehow he had learned a blend of love and hatred—a wish to love her as he dreamed of loving her and a wish to hurt her as men rarely dream of hurting women.

"Of course," his mother had drawled, watching him write the note, "it is quite impossible now. And after all, dear—" The words ended with a raise of pudgy shoulders.

"Oh, surely!" Alec agreed lamely.

It was like Estelle to pull him into a mess like this, he thought. To make him love her and hate her and then leave him unable to fulfill the least of his morbid and cruel fancies. Yes, it was like her MARCIA came down to the pier to see the Fields off. The place was thick with a salt tang that had been carried into the big barn-like structure by the fog of the gray day.

"You're lucky to be out of this, you two," she said, pulling her fur coat closely around her throat. "I wish I were leaving with you."

She had decided it would be kinder to act as though nothing whatever had happened.

"Better come along!" Field invited with a weak echo of his old hospitality.

"I'd love to but unfortunately I have an important luncheon engagement. It's with a young man who writes poems to me and all that kind of thing. Estelle, you're rather lightly dressed, aren't you? It's such a fearful day. The jonquills in the florists' windows are positively insulting, aren't they?"

Suddenly she became silent and slipped her arm through Jim Field's. He was surprised at her touch. Marcia was reputed to be a "cool one." She had always had that reputation except at that one time when she was said to have cared for Ted Jeffries.

"Jim," she went on quickly, "I have a story to tell you. It's far too ribald for this child's ears. Come along down here a little way and I'll narrate the naughty thing."

He walked with her, disinterestedly. Field had felt numb ever since the first threat of his loss had come to him with a drop of stock he had thought to be untouchable.

"I had a funny feeling just then," Marcia confided when Estelle was out of hearing. "God, isn't it, how we Americans use the word 'funny' in the wrong sense so often?"

"Yes," Field agreed. He wondered why she was sparring. "Well," she went on, "I had this—odd sensation because I realized I have never asked you about someone of whom I want very much to hear. You know a good many things—too many, you know—and you might know this. If you do you must tell me. You must—"

"What is it?" he asked shortly. "Do you know what's become of that boy who used to work for you—the one named Pablito? The one who lived with Norris Noyes?"

"What makes you ask?" "I want to know, Jim. It's important."

Italy Builds City in Pontine Marsh

Old Malaria Seat to Provide Farms for 30,000 Ex-Soldiers

SABAUDIA, Italy.—(AP)—This new city, the second to rear its head in the hitherto useless Pontine marshes, was inaugurated Sunday by King Emanuel and Queen Elena.

The reclaimed territory around Sabaudia is one day expected to provide farm homes for some 30,000 needy war veterans upon fertile wheat-raising land.

Members of the royal court mingled with Fascist officials Sunday to hail the regime's conquest over a reclamation problem which defied the efforts of the old Roman empire.

Mussolini laid the cornerstone of Sabaudia on August 5, last year, on a day-long excursion, during which he helped to harvest the finest wheat crop in Sabaudia's sister community in the Pontine marsh area, namely Littoria.

The king and queen Sunday inaugurated, before a crowd of many thousands, Sabaudia's Fascist headquarters, a hospital carabinieri and military barracks.

A third sister city, Pontinia, is expected to be finished by the end of 1935.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT—BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Encore

By Fisher

BUICK's 1934 reception strikingly resembles the insistent demand of an audience for an encore from a favorite star. Led by an army of Buick owners, all the public is far surpassing previous enthusiasm for Buick. Everywhere, the talk about Buick is turning into a flood of buying.

When you come to take your first ride in a Buick, you will find—in whichever type and size you prefer to buy—stunning new beauty and luxury. There is also new engineering progress... a broader incorporation of fine performance, thorough-going dependability and safety... greater ease and convenience. These desirable advantages are expressed in the new Knee-Action gliding ride as only Buick gives it, in automatic starting and other new features, in finer smoothness and quiet, with greater power.

Buick builds this year's cars in the size you want to buy—119, 128, and 136-inch wheelbase. All have the same high excellence, the same flashing performance, the same famous dependability, the same advanced features.

Forgetting
O birds that sing the thankful psalms,
Rebuke human fretting.
Teach us your secret of content—
Your science of forgetting;
For every life must have its ills,
You, too, have hours of sorrow;
Teach us, like you, to lay them by
And sing again tomorrow.
For gems of darkest jet may lie
Within a golden setting.
And he is wise who understands
The science of forgetting—Selected.

Boulder Dam—Progress, Step by Step, On Uncle Sam's Mammoth Project

Progress in building the mighty barrier of steel and concrete which will be Boulder Dam is shown graphically in these step-by-step views of the government's $155,000,000 project. (1) A downstream view of the site before the thousands of workers started their construction labors, showing Marble Canyon in the Colorado river, in all its virgin beauty. (2) Preliminary work under way, with temporary bridge and catwalk erected, after trench had been dug to divert the Colorado river during the dam building. (3) Concrete has been poured and the barrier is taking shape, the "berry boxes" being sections for the foundation of the dam, with the eight-foot slots from which cooling water is poured on the concrete shown between the sections. (4) Extent of the construction to date, showing the vast wedge of the barrier already reared, as seen from the control tower of the 150-ton cableway on the Nevada rim. (5) How the dam, with powerhouse, will look when completed in 1937, according to present schedule.

BASEBALL SEASON

Chickasaws Tuesday afternoon.

By BILL BRAUCHER
NEA Service Sports Editor
NEW YORK—Here comes the big guess:
AMERICAN NATIONAL
New York St. Louis
Washington Chicago
Boston New York
Detroit Pittsburgh
St. Louis Boston
Cleveland Cincinnati
Philadelphia Brooklyn
Chicago Philadelphia

Races in both leagues that promise to be the closest in years seem to be on the program as the baseball season begins. Shifting of players has made the task of selection the hardest experienced in many years.

In the American League, as this observed sees it, the Yankees seem to have everything needed to win a pennant. Last year, due to illness and injury, the pitching bogged down badly. Now, with Ruffing in splendid shape, the team appears to be a winner. I am expecting a great season also from Lefty Gomez.

Washington won a pennant last year largely through the superb pitching of General Alvin Crowder. Another season from the General, who is getting along in years, hardly can be expected. The fact that Clark Griffith has been shopping for a pitcher speaks volumes on the weakness of the Washington club.

Cards in National
In the National League, the Cardinals begin the race with strength in every department. Last year, even though the team led the league in run-making, there was discord under the management of Gabby Street. With Frisch in the saddle, and with the best reserves a club could ask for, the Cards should win 100 games.

The St. Louis entry will have a distinct edge on the Giants in punch. Pitching carries the New Yorkers to a pennant last year. With the lively ball that the league has adopted for 1934, I do not regard pitching with the same respect that had to be accorded last season.

Schoolboy Rowe
The dark horses in both leagues will be the teams I have picked for fourth place—Detroit in the American League, and Pittsburgh in the National.

Cochrane's Tigers loom up on paper as the best young team in the younger circuit. The Mick is counting heavily on Schoolboy Rowe's arm to round into shape—and if it does, the pitching will be amply taken care of. Goose Goslin has one more good year in his system, and he'll just about make that Tiger outfield of Pete Fox, Goslin and Gerald Walker one of the best wrecking crews in the majors.

The Pirates, who bogged down last year frightfully for want of a first class hurler, seem to have strengthened the pitching staff materially in the addition of Red Lucas, whom they obtained from the Cincinnati Reds. Lucas, with the possibility that rookie Ralph Birkner will come through, should give the Pirates plenty of pitching.

The Wainers, Lindstrom and Arky Vaughn, the shortstop who has been pounding the lively ball for homers all through the spring training circuit, should supply plenty of heavy shell-

2 Bound Over for Attempt to Kill

Tennessee Youth Held for Theft of Automobile Here

Andrew Smith and Drew Williams, negroes, were bound over to the grand jury in municipal court Monday afternoon on charges of assault with intent to kill Chink Hamilton.

Bond for Smith was set at $350, bond for Williams was fixed at $200. Joseph Hill, Chattanooga, Tenn., youth was bound over to the grand jury on a charge of grand larceny. He is held for stealing an automobile here several nights ago from R. V. Herndon.

Hill was arrested and returned here when he attempted to sell the car to a policeman at Donaldson. Bond for Hill was fixed at $300.

Willie Chohran was fined $50 and costs for destroying property. Deulah Mae Moore was fined $2.50 on a charge of assault and battery. Judge W. K. Lemley suspended the fine on good behavior.

Several cases were continued.

New Use Found for Mail Order Catalogs

OKLAHOMA CITY—(AP)—Federal officers, responding to calls to chase machine-gun desperadoes of the southwest, now snatch up their keys, their pistols, and their mail order catalogues.

As their car speeds down the highway, they adjust the catalogues beneath their vests.

Some contend that while a steel vest won't stop a machine-gun bullet, the bulky volume will.

Threats Lead to a CWA Shutdown

Federal Office Closed at Van Buren Following Local Trouble

LITTLE ROCK—Following threats of violence from a crowd gathered in front of the federal emergency relief office Monday morning at Van Buren, Crawford county, O. N. Eubanks, county relief administrator, closed the office temporarily because, he said, local authorities would not aid him in operating the relief program without interference.

Mr. Eubanks, who was in Little Rock Sunday to confer with W. R. Dyess, state relief director, informed Floyd Sharp, state FERA executive secretary, by telephone that he had taken the action in accordance with instructions from Mr. Dyess, who, he said, directed him Sunday to close the office if further disturbances occurred.

Mr. Dyess telegraphed Mr. Eubanks, after the latter's conversation with Mr. Sharp, to transfer the rural rehabilitation headquarters to Alma today to assure continued operation. He also instructed the county administrator to keep the office closed until investigators, who will be sent to Van Buren, make a report. Mr. Eubanks said.

banks said most of the crowd were former CWA workers and not farmers. "The action at Van Buren is the result of misunderstanding of orders from Washington," Mr. Sharp said. "We have been instructed to curtail relief activities approximately 75 per cent, especially in towns. The new Work Division program is moving slowly, as we want to be sure it is on a firm basis.

"We are not going to see any person in Arkansas starve, but we can't provide relief as before, because we haven't the money. It is going to take time, patience and co-operation on every one's part to get the new programs going in order to give every section of the state its share of relief."

Story of Ruth as Orphan Is Myth

Actually Star in Big League Before Parents Died

RICHMOND, Va.—(AP)—Quoting a sister of Babe Ruth, Mrs. Mary Moberly of Richmond, the Times-Dispatch says in a copyright story Monday night that the Babe was not an orphan when he started playing baseball.

His real name, the paper says, is George Herman Ruth Jr., and he is the son of George Herman Ruth who ran a saloon at the corner of Utah and Lombard streets, Baltimore. He is not, the paper says, George Herman Earhardt, as is popularly believed.

In its interview with Mrs. Moberly, the Times-Dispatch quotes her as saying that her brother was "mischievous, but not incorrigible," and says he was put in St. Mary's Industrial School by his family for playing hockey from school.

Supposed to be without kin or kin he actually has an uncle, Joseph Ruth, a jeweler on Washington boulevard, Baltimore. Another uncle, William Ruth, is a carpenter. The Babe also has an aunt.

The "Baltimore orphan," who became famous in baseball as such, was not orphaned, the paper's article says, until after he had become a star pitcher for Boston in 1917.

A visitor in Richmond on Friday, when the northbound Yankees played an exhibition game here, the Babe called on the Moberly family, presented them with a check and met 15-year-old Florence Moberly when she went to the ball park to see the game.

"I don't know how the story got around that the Babe had no relatives, unless he wanted to spare us the publicity part of it," his sister said. "Babe was never a fellow to talk much about anything, but baseball. He's lived it, and he's still living it, but the other day—and I could see age wrinkles and a touch of sadness in his eyes when he said it—he told me, 'Sis, I'm getting old now.'"

Final Action Near on Bankhead Bill

Passed by Senate, House Expected to Approve It Tuesday

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Action on legislation to aid municipalities suffering financial disorders was on the senate's program Tuesday, along with a presidential proposal to appoint a committee to survey the airport situation.

On the house side, leaders hoped to complete congressional action on the Bankhead cotton production control bill during the day.

Bankhead Bill Tuesday
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Final congressional action on the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill was delayed Monday but Chairman Jones of the house agricultural committee said he expected to call up the conference report Tuesday.

The report—a compromise between senate and house measures—has been approved by the senate. Only house action is needed to send the bill, which aims to restrict cotton marketing from the 1931 crop, to 10,000,000 bales, to the White House.

Jones said he did not ask house approval Monday because "several members who are absent asked me to wait until Tuesday." He said a favorable house vote on the report seemed "assured."

Congressional leaders said they were certain the president would sign the bill.

Administration of the measure will be the task of the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Administration.

Quotas to be assigned individual farmers will be worked out by county committees set up under the voluntary acreage reduction program. They must be approved by the secretary of agriculture.

The voluntary program, intended to restrict cotton plantings this season to 25,000,000 acres, will not be affected by the Bankhead bill, officials said.

New Aviation Policy

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Out of a White House conference Monday came a suggestion by President Roosevelt for a commission set up by congress to formulate a national aviation policy.

Those who took part in the discussions said the president desired pending air mail legislation amended and enacted at this session.

One of the conferees, Chairman McKellar of the senate postoffice committee, said that Mr. Roosevelt suggested contracts which may be awarded by the pending bills be on such a basis as to allow them to be terminated once the national policy is agreed upon.

McKellar added that he planned to bring up the air mail bill in the senate Tuesday and that it would be amended along the lines proposed by the president.

Storks Are Badly Beaten in Opener

Go Down, 10 to 2, in Game With Shreveport Nine

Hope Storks suffered a 10 to 2 defeat in the first baseball game of the season here Sunday afternoon against the Morris-Dixon club of Shreveport. "Blackie" Elliott, young right hander, started in the box for the locals. For five innings he pitched effective baseball, striking out nine men and allowing but three runs.

With the score standing 3 to 2 in favor of the visitors, Manager Lloyd Coop pulled Elliott from the mound to try out Velvin and Madison. Velvin was wild and ineffective. Shreveport collected four runs in the next two innings. Madison was sent in but was unable to check the hitting spree, allowing three more runs.

Several substitutions in the infield and outfield were made during intervals of the game in order to give as many players possible an opportunity to play.

Manager Coop announced Monday that new uniforms have arrived and will be worn in the opening game of the Two-States league at Texarkana Friday afternoon. The newly formed league is comprised of two Texarkana clubs, Hope and Atlanta, Texas.

Next Sunday afternoon at Fair Park the Storks play Atlanta.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

Tired of Spinach? Try Serving It This Way

By SISTER MARY
NEA Service Staff Writer

Remember the classic picture of the little girl violently rejecting her broccoli because it was all hateful spinach to her? A good many members of the family seem to agree with her about this richly ironful and vitaminous vegetable, but there are a few ways to get it eaten, benefits and all.

Try, for instance, serving it in a separate dish with horseradish, lemon juice or vinegar for a sauce, or garnish it with broiled mushroom caps so that it looks like something completely new in the way of edibles.

I have always been sure that the people who don't like spinach had been unfortunate enough to try it first in its gritty state. There could be no worse introduction.

Pick Healthy Leaves

At market look for plants with plenty of good healthy leaves. Medium-sized plants with dark green leaves fresh and crisp free from sand or dirt, guarantee that the vegetable will be tender and an attractive vivid green when cooked and dressed for the table.

Nowadays it's seldom that a shipping of spinach is decidedly weedy. However, this should be considered, as weedy spinach means loss of weight as well as time in sorting out the weeds.

Spinach that is very sandy or dirty is difficult to clean, and the grit seems to cling to all washing.

If the leaves are light colored and of a yellowish tinge and tightly curled, plant insects are usually present. That particular lot of spinach will have an unpleasant flavor when cooked. A few plants with a yellowed leaf do not mean inferior quality and of course the center of the plants often contains the tender yellow baby leaves which are very delicate and desirable.

How to Wash

Although the washing of spinach is simple, it's important. Always lift the leaves from one water bath to another. In this way the sand which settles to the bottom of the pan is not disturbed. It's a good plan, too, to let spinach stand in cold salt water for at least half an hour before cleaning and looking over for cooking. This freshens any wilted leaves and draws out hidden insects.

Cut the leaves from the stems. The stems are hollow, are apt to contain sand and furnish little food value. They take longer to cook than the leaves and make it necessary to prolong the cooking period if they are not discarded.

After thoroughly washing let the leaves drain in a colander for a few minutes to remove excess water. Then cook covered over a medium fire until steaming, about five minutes. Remove cover and toss lightly with a fork. Cook uncovered until tender and almost dry. Season with salt just before taking off the fire. Drain if necessary before adding additional seasoning and serving.

You Take the Others

Experts are flashing the news that several noble gee-gees have been nominated to obtain the trust crown which reached so faintly last year on the brow of Equipoise. You can have them. I'll have to take Ekky. When midsummer comes, the son of Penant-Swinging will come swinging down the lane again. You will know then that the old champion still has what it takes.

Journalistic drummer boys are sounding the tom-toms in behalf of a horse named Larranaga. Freddie Hopkins, who used to ready up Equipoise for the races, is now in charge of this animated ludo and begs to report that when old Ekky comes back to the races in Maryland this year, Larranaga will be there to break his heel.

But He Can Be Wrong

Now Hopkins happens to be a pretty fair conditioner of horses, and his predictions usually have not been far wrong. He can look at a horse and tell within two-fifths of a second how he'll run the mile. He was wrong a couple of fifth the year Twenty Grand made the others in the Derby look like Clydesdales, but he had the right steel even though his prognostication of the time (which was 2:01 4/5) was a bit pessimistic.

Any forecast, however, which gives Larranaga a heat over Mrs. Swing-ing's stalwart son seems to me to be so much salami. Too often have I seen Ekky come from back there in the stretch and kick clouds into these country horse's faces. Freddie or no Freddie, my 5-cent mind get goes smack-dad on that Whitney horse's proboscis.

A meeting between the two has been inevitable since Larranaga headed home first in the Cuban Grand National, a $50,000 fixture at Havana. He is at Bowie now and his name is on the line for the big handicaps. A month's training has brought him to razor-edge form.

In Shape

Equipoise has spent the winter at Lexington, where winters are just cold enough to keep the blood flowing.

JOHN BARRYMORE

thing, beside myself, and only when I was past 45 did I realize what life was all about. I wasn't primarily trying to be happy myself—I wanted to make Dolores happy."

He Goes Domestic

Every Hollywood witness declares that this last marriage did make a difference in John Barrymore. The bon vivant, the great lover, and great divorcer, the hell-rearing rioter of the Barrymore legend, became in fact the personification of the pious papa.

For there were children, first a girl then a boy. And all Hollywood knows that the great Barrymore, profile forgotten, cooed over these children as much as the newest young father.

Marriage in the mid-forties turned the great lever domestic in a big way. This time it seems sure that John Barrymore's marriage is going to be a success. In the rambling house with the low-beamed living room and the famous Barrymore collection of old glass, birds, and guns, two people are devoting all their time to each other and to the rearing of their two children.

Hopes for Stage Star

Barrymore has a third child, a daughter, Diana, by his first marriage. She is now 12 years old "and one of my very, very best, loveliest, and dearest friends," as John puts it.

But it is on Dolores Ethel Mae and John Blyth Barrymore, Jr., that the attraction of two fond parents is centered. Both are mere babies as yet, and it is impossible to tell whether either is destined to carry on the actor tradition that runs so strongly in both the Barrymore and Costello families.

A heroic reading made the prediction that Dolores Ethel Mae is destined to be an actress, and John Blyth will incline to chemistry. Proud papa Barrymore has said he won't interfere with the choice of either when they are grown up, but anyone can see he hopes that at least one or both will dedicate himself to stage or screen.

Love Again for Pauline

To many an adoring feminine admirer, John Barrymore remains the great stage lover of all time. And yet, to the man Barrymore himself, love came most forcefully in his mid-forties.

Not only to the male side of the screen world did love come thus late. Only a few weeks ago one of the great feminine stars of the early days of the screen became a bride at 50.

Amid a scene of military pomp and ceremony, Pauline Frederick took a fifth husband, Colonel Joseph A. Macnamara. The regimental band played, Lohengrin when the happy couple disembarked on Governor's Island after the ceremony.

Mary Pickford still believes that some of Miss Frederick's performance rank among the greatest of the screen, and she has retained much of the charm that made her famous.

Romance at 50

Her former husbands were Frank A. Andrews, architect; Willard Mack, playwright; Dr. Charles C. Rathbone; and Hugh C. Leighton, a hotel man.

Miss Frederick's New York stage debut was made 30 years ago; now, at 50, she makes another appearance as a star in that perennial play "Matrimony."

The screen, especially in its younger days, portrayed love always as a youthful and springlike passion. But two of its greatest artists found love for themselves around the half-cen-
